

Committed to “saving lives” and changing minds”

Contributed by the Micronesia Red Cross Society (MRCS)

The International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) originated from humanist and visionary, Henry Dunant in 1863 who advocated the idea of providing ‘neutral’ medical services on the battlefield. Since its establishment in 1919, the IFRC has been the world’s largest humanitarian network, providing assistance without discriminating on the basis of nationality, race, religious beliefs, class or political opinions.

Under its globally recognized emblem: a red cross and a red crescent on a white background, the IFRC has assisted 150 million people around the world. The Federation achieves its work through the dedication of over 13 million volunteers and 187 National Societies, all of whom are committed to ‘saving lives and changing minds’. With such an extensive network of National Societies, in almost every country in the world, the IFRC carries out relief operations to assist victims of disasters, while simultaneously strengthening the capacities of its member National Societies. The Federation focuses on its development work on four core areas: promoting humanitarian values, disaster response, disaster preparedness and health and community care. Co-operation between National Societies has enabled the IFRC not only to develop capacities, but also to reach individual communities.

As the 181st member of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, The Micronesia Red Cross Society (MRCS) has demonstrated its capacity in providing humanitarian assistance, particularly in disaster management. This has been demonstrated during a cholera outbreak in Pohnpei State in 2000. The MRCS provided medical supplies and mobilized more than 100 volunteers to support its public health education program. The Red Cross also played a key role in responding to the disaster when tropical storm Chata’an struck Chuuk state in 2002, causing more than 60 landslides on some of the worst affected islands, and leading to at least 47 deaths and 109 injuries. The MRCS participated in the damage and needs assessments, together with government authorities and provided direct assistance to the victims, such as non-food relief supplies. Similar action was also taken by the MRCS when Typhoon Sudal struck Yap state in 2004 which caused widespread destruction in affected areas. As part of the regional disaster preparedness program, the MRCS distributed basic relief items such as blankets, sheets, clothing and water containers for approximately 100 families in need.

As part of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement; a global network of 187 national societies, the Micronesia Red Cross aims to provide neutral and impartial humanitarian assistance to the Micronesian people, especially to those most in need. The Micronesia Red Cross Society is headquartered in Pohnpei with Suzie G. Yoma as Executive Director and Mr. Diaz Joseph as the Chairman of the MRCS Board of Directors. To deliver its humanitarian commitment, MRCS has local Chapters in each state of FSM with Mr. Myron Hashiguchi as Chairman, Board of Advisors MRCS-Chuuk Chapter, Mr. Berlin Sigrah as Chairman, Board of Advisors MRCS-Kosrae Chapter and Mr. James Lukan as Chairman, Board of Advisors MRCS-Yap Chapter

Girl Scouts “Thinking Day”

Girl Scouts of Pohnpei

On February 25, over thirty current and future Girl Scouts and Troop Leaders gathered at the Pohnpei Public Library to celebrate World Thinking Day, a global scouting event that recognizes the birthdays of Lord Baden-Powell and Olave Baden-Powell, the founders of scouting. This year, the theme was aligned with Millennium Development Goal #7: “We can save our planet.” In honor of this motif, girls and women (in addition to some wonderful male supporters) met at the library to plant a Friendship Garden, learn about climate change and conservation, and celebrate our island and the earth. Despite some rain showers, spirits were high as participants worked together to paint two beautiful banners, learn about Girl Scouts Pohnpei, get to know each other, and churn the earth before depositing shrubs and flowering plants into carefully arranged rows, roots first. Fenno Brunken, Climate Change Advisor at the Secretariat of the Pacific Community (SPC), spoke about climate change and its impacts on the Pacific islands. As part of his presentation, girls participated in an interactive game where they represented our island, the threat of a tropical storm, and the social and natural resources that ensure our safety in the face of such hazards. Together, attendees reviewed a list of twenty conservation Dos and Don’ts (“DO drink water from reusable water bottles...DON’T fish in the Marine Protected Areas or buy undersized fish.”), compiled with assistance from the Conservation Society of Pohnpei, USDA-NRCS, SPC, and the International Organization for Migration. After painting, planting, and sliding about in the mud, the girls, leaders, and supporters grasped hands, with arms crossed right over left, in a friendship circle, signifying the end of the event – but just the beginning of Girl Scouting on Pohnpei.

On Saturday, March 10, from 9am to noon at PCR Hotel Nantelik, Girl Scouts Pohnpei is hosting a Troop Leader training, for all responsible adults who are interested in becoming a Girl Scout Troop Leader or Assistant Troop Leader. In the meantime, Girl Scouts Pohnpei is holding a logo and uniform design contest. All entries, drawn in pen or pencil, should be submitted at the Pohnpei Public Library or the Peace Corps office by March 15 at 5pm. The theme of the logo should be “unity” and the theme of the uniform, which may consist of a t-shirt, local skirt, or both, should be “cultural heritage.” There will be prizes for the winners. Please call 320-2080 for more information on these contests or to sign up for the Troop Leader Training. Come to learn what Girl Scouts is all about and how you can become involved, to help enrich the lives of girls and women across Pohnpei.

...Accreditation

institution of learning by an official review board after the school has met specific requirements." The end goal of accreditation is to ensure that all schools provide for students, an environment that is conducive to learning.

NDOE says that the accreditation process would help FSM schools to improve the educational services and opportunities they provide for students and to raise the level of student academic performance. The regulations set the legal framework on a compulsory basis for minimum service and performance standards for all schools in the FSM for the benefit of all students so that they all have equal rights to quality education no matter where in the FSM they attend school.

Just how compulsory those requirements are, is a matter of debate.

One of the impediments to the implementation of the accreditation regulations is the legal structure of the FSM that weighs heavily in favor of State sovereignty. For instance, Title 40 of the FSM Code requires that all schools in the FSM meet required minimum standards and undergo a process of accreditation. Indeed language in the FSM regulations requires the closure of any school that cannot rise above a Level 1 evaluation after three straight years of evaluation. Pohnpei State has no such statute.

One participant in the training who said that he hated to play "devil's advocate" did so anyway, and asked how the National Government could force any of the FSM States to close a school without violating States' rights to govern themselves.

We consulted attorneys at both the National and State levels. Both said that the question of whether, in general, State or National statutes prevail was much too broad a question to answer generically for all cases.

One of the attorneys suggested in an off the cuff manner without having seen any of the relative laws, that he supposed that in the case of a nationally mandated school closure due to the school's lack of ability to attain accreditation, a State whose statutes do not provide for, or require such a closure would probably have the right to choose to continue to treat the institution as a school even without national recognition of the errant school's right to continue operating.

Whether or not such a school would continue to receive the benefit of Compact funding would be another matter since the Compact treaty with the United States is a National Government arrangement.

One of the participants at this morning's training suggested that likely the only way that most States would comply thoroughly and on time would be if funding was tied to the thorough and timely submission of accreditation reports.

"Laws are destined to fail if there are no specific funds assigned to enforce them," our source at NDOE said. "That has been the problem with Title 40 from the beginning," he said. "Even now there is no specific funding for accreditation." He said that so far, to the best of his knowledge none of the State Governments has hired or identified personnel to deal specifically with the issue of accreditation.

He also said that there has always been a bit of a cavalier attitude regarding the filing of reports required by the National government; a sort of "I'll get to it when I can; maybe—someday" type of attitude mainly because there's not much that the National government can do about it.

The presenter at today's training said that NDOE made the mistake of assuming that because State Directors of the Departments of Education unanimously agreed that accreditation standards should be implemented in their own school systems it meant that they would comply. But when it came to time to actually do the work it was left undone, "maybe due to lack of resources."

The FSM's regulations would ultimately evaluate individual FSM school performance from Early Childhood Education through 12th grade based on six standards: Leadership, Curriculum Standards, Teacher Performance, Data Management, School Campus, Classroom and other school facilities, and School Improvement Plans. The evaluation of four criteria under each of those separate standards would be conducted on a four level scale with Level 1 being a rating for the lowest performance and Level 4 a rating for the highest level performance.

Under the FSM accreditation regulations the FSM would issue two types of accreditation certificates for FSM Schools. A "National Special Certificate of Achievement" would be issued to schools that meet or exceed level three and four requirements. That type of certification would be good for three years before peer re-evaluation from a State appointed accreditation committee would be required but would still require an annual submission of a self study report.

Schools that substantially comply with accreditation standards and have a plan to address shortcomings (Level 2) would earn a National Certificate of Accreditation. That type of accreditation certificate would require a peer re-evaluation after one year. A school at that level of accreditation would also be required to submit an annual self study report.

Schools that do not comply with regulations and do not have a plan to remedy shortcomings, and that have four or more determinations by their State accreditation committees at Level 1 will have earned the accreditation category of "Special Measures." A school in that category of accreditation will be provided with technical assistance to develop a turnaround plan and will be evaluated annually. If, after three years a school has still not achieved at least a National Certificate of Accreditation it will be declared to be non-accredited and the Secretary for NDOE will advise the State Director to close the school and relocate students and staff members. "It will be unlawful for a school to operate if it is not accredited," this morning's presentation materials said.

The presenter at today's training of Pohnpei educators said that the FSM's accreditation is loosely based on the accreditation standards of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC), the same group that performs accreditation evaluations of the College of Micronesia.

Only two schools in the FSM are accredited by WASC, Xavier High School in Chuuk and Pohnpei Island Central School (PICS) in Pohnpei. Xavier was awarded accreditation for six years and is due for a renewal visit within the next few months. According to Pohnpei's Acting Director of the Department of Education, Mr. Reynold Albert, PICS was awarded WASC accreditation for only one year, a situation he called, "not good."

WASC accreditation lends prestige to the diplomas issued by the institution but holders of a diploma from a school that is not accredited by WASC are not necessarily limited in their choice of colleges or universities they may attend. Though universities look at high school Grade Point Averages (GPA), and a high GPA from a WASC accredited school says more about the capabilities of a student, a student's scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) are ultimately a much larger determinant of whether a post secondary school will accept a student, one professional post secondary educator in the FSM said.

Through self study a motivated student can achieve good marks on the SAT exam regardless of where they went to school, whether those schools provided all of the instructional hours they were required to provide, and regardless of the quality of education received there. However, an average student who studies at a school with a high standard of academic achievement such as one that is accredited and who also has a reasonable GPA has a much better chance of doing well on the SAT.

However, if an SAT examination scheduled for late last year is any indication, it is difficult for an FSM student to take the SAT. The handful of students whose parents had fought tooth and nail for their children to have an opportunity to sit for the exam in Pohnpei showed up at the arranged time only to discover that there was no proctor. According to emails from angry parents sent to The Kaselehlie Press, the proctor was ultimately found washing his driveway having completely forgotten about the exam. The exam was rescheduled for later in the day.

The vast majority of High School students in the FSM sit for the COMET, the College of Micronesia Entrance Test rather than the SAT. Some FSM school administrators use the success of its students on the COMET as a tool to gauge educational success though the test was never designed for that purpose. In the absence of other standards, outside granting agencies also look at the results of that test. But that test is intended only as a tool for the College of Micronesia to determine at what level a student should be enrolled if at all.

The FSM's regulations for accreditation are designed to ensure that ALL students in the FSM are enrolled in primary and secondary schools that have high standards of academic achievement.

The presenter at this morning's training said that though the December 15 deadline for filing of State accreditation reports has already passed it is important to "pick up the pieces and move on" with the plan. He encouraged the 40 or so participants at the training to work toward getting the accreditation evaluations completed as quickly as possible while also being thorough and accurate.

Pacific leaders agree on urgent need to address integrity of governments in the region

Joint Press Release
Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat
Commonwealth Pacific Governance Facility (Commonwealth Secretariat)

1st March 2012, Brisbane, Australia - There is an urgent need to address integrity and accountability of governments in Pacific island countries

The former Prime Minister and current Minister of Public Enterprises of Papua New Guinea Rt Hon. Sir Mekere Morauta told the Regional Consultative Meeting on Democratic Institutions yesterday: "A good government, clean government, can use political stability to govern in the long-term interests of the country; a bad government can use political stability to destroy the nation."

Participants at the meeting jointly organised by the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat (PIFS) in Brisbane, Australia, from 27-29 February 2012 voiced their strong determination to find and share local solutions to weak governance. The findings of the meeting will shape the future work of the Commonwealth Pacific Governance Facility (CPGF), based in Honiara.

This was the first ever opportunity for Pacific island leaders, members of parliament, senior government officials, representatives of non-government organisations and development partners to discuss the challenges facing democratic institutions in the region.

"Political instability not only affects a government's ability to provide services and development activity for its people, it affects relationships with development partners and donors," Hon. Dr Derek Sikua, former Solomon Islands Prime Minister and now Leader of Opposition told the meeting.

Delegates commended this opportunity to meet together and share experiences and ideas about democracy as it is practiced in Pacific Island states.

Three-term President of Kiribati and current MP, Rt. Hon. Sir Jeremia Tabai noted: "It is almost impossible to talk about political integrity without also talking about conduct and public trust. In our democratic system of government we need the confidence that those in power will use it to advance the public interest."

Sir Jeremia and other distinguished delegates applauded the Commonwealth and CPGF's commitment to supporting and equipping democratic institutions in the Pacific region.

The regional leaders and donor partners expressed appreciation to the Commonwealth, the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat and CPGF for consulting them prior to the establishment of a regional work programme. They called for further dialogue on the concepts of integrity and accountability in government as seen in the existing political values and principles of the region, and reflected in the Pacific Plan.

The delegates cautioned that political issues were complex and subject to country-specific conditions including historical experience, constitutional and institutional architecture, and unique geographic, economic and cultural characteristics.

Pacific governments must have greater influence over donor assistance in the area of politics and democratic institutions, and agreed that part of CPGF's role should be to foster an effective role for the Opposition in national parliaments to improve accountability and coordination of donor support.

The meeting proposed that CPGF consider facilitating regular future meetings and leadership dialogue on the challenges and successful innovations in democracy and democratic institutions in the Pacific region and that such meetings address the key issues identified during the course of discussions, including: the role of traditional authority in democratic political systems; ways to institutionalise political parties; the promotion of effective oversight parliamentary institutions; possible reforms to improve electoral systems and constitutions; the importance of freedom of information and the role of a responsible media.

Editor's note: Representatives from the FSM including Pohnpei's Governor John Ehsa and Kahndi Eliesar of the FSM Department of Foreign Affairs also attending this meeting in Brisbane. Advance information received by The Kaselehlie Press said that Pohnpei's Speaker, Peter Lohn (of SOKEHS!!) was to have attended the workshop as well but we could not find his face in the group photo of participants sent by the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat nor in any of the other photos sent by PIFS. As the participants were travelling at press time we could not confirm Speaker Lohn's participation.

The enrolled schools in Pohnpei prepared students according to the official Scripps study booklet, which has several hundred words to be learned.

The six participating schools in Pohnpei qualified 10 students for the Pohnpei championship bout. Each had mastered the official Scripps study words at school level competitions:

Marla Samuel was the winner of the Awak Elementary School competition and represented her school at the Pohnpei Championship. Rochelle K. Chunn and Lonie Nicholas represented Kolonia Elementary School. Denzel O.G. Ligohr and Maryfe Quiambao represented Nett Elementary. Sharon Dekampo represented Ohmine Elementary. Mitchell Marino and Salyanna Santo represented Saladak Elementary School, and Courtney Simina and Jamie Noket represented Sekere Elementary School.

The 10 school champions battled to win the Pohnpei State level competition and were not stumped by difficult words like "prestidigitation" (sleight of hand as might be seen in a "magic" show) or "flamboyant" (elaborately showy).

The students had studied the Scripps study booklet so hard that after many tense rounds of competition the pronouncer of the competition ran out of words from the official Scripps study booklet and had to find more words for the contestants to spell.

Lonie Nicholas, a 7th grader from Kolonia Elementary School, won the state level competition when she properly spelled the word "pharmaceutical" (having to do with the dispensing of prescription drugs) Mitchell Marino, an 8th grader from Saladak Elementary School took second place after he properly spelled the word "rhododendron," (a type of evergreen shrub that bears colorful flowers. They can't be found in Pohnpei.)

The two champions will represent Pohnpei state at the regional Spelling Bee competition to be held in Guam on March 3, 2012.

"I am very excited to represent Pohnpei State in the regional competition," said Spelling Bee champion Lonie Nicholas. "I will be representing not only myself but my family, friends, community, school, and even my State. I can't wait to experience this trip, which is the first air trip for me. I cannot promise that I will win the Spelling Bee in Guam but I can promise that I will do my best to reach the goal – which is to win the competition!"

Second place winner Mitchell Marino said, "I am so happy! I am very proud of myself and that I will be representing Pohnpei State in the regional competition. I hope that this case will set an example and motivate my fellow-students to strive for excellence in Pohnpei."

GEAR UP program would like to congratulate and to wish the champions the best of luck in Guam – to earn the chance to compete in the final competition in Washington, D.C.

GEAR UP would like to express its sincere appreciation to the number of sponsors that will allow the champions to participate in the regional Spelling Bee competition: United Airlines, US Department of Education, and the Embassy of the People's Republic of China in Pohnpei

GEAR UP would also like to express its appreciation to the number of supporters and volunteers that made the Scripps Spelling Bee possible in Pohnpei: Rotary Club of Pohnpei; Pohnpei State Department of Education; US Embassy in Pohnpei; Peace Corps; International Organization for Migration; US Department of Agriculture Rural Development; FSM Development Bank; Ace Office Supplies, MicroPC, Palm Terrace, Nihco, and Ray and Dors.

Improved fisheries management needed to ensure socio-economic and food security in Micronesia

By Jeanine Almany and
Kevin L. Rhodes

The Micronesia Challenge is a commitment by five governments to conserve the vast marine and terrestrial resources that sustain island peoples and cultures across the Marshall Islands, Federated State of Micronesia, Palau, CNMI and Guam, by 2020. In support of the Challenge, The Nature Conservancy's Asia Pacific Marine Program recently completed a study, funded by the Alex C. Walker Foundation and Sylvia Parker, which looked at the economic factors driving the increasing demand for coastal fisheries resources in Micronesia. According to the study, some of Micronesia's coastal fisheries, such as Guam, are already severely overfished, some, such as Palau and the Marshalls, have been fully exploited and others, like Pohnpei, are on the brink of collapse. These effects are being driven by economic, political and social factors, including unsustainable fishing practices.

The following economic drivers were identified as contributing to coastal fisheries resource declines: 1) the commercialization and export of nearshore marine resources; 2) the decline in traditional management and fishing practices; 3) open access fishing regimes, and 4) long-term under-pricing of reef and pelagic resources by market owners and exporters.

So what can we do about it?

According to Dr. Kevin Rhodes, lead author of the study, "the most important thing we can do is to reduce the overall volume of fisheries resources being harvested. Simply put, fishers are removing more fish than the reef can produce, in some cases several times more." This is being partly driven by low wholesale fishing prices. One key element to achieving reduced fish volume is better management of spawning stocks, which are currently undermanaged, or in some cases unmanaged. Regionally, fishers are continuously catching fish from spawning aggregations before they reproduce or taking fish at a size before they mature. Together with the ineffectiveness of current management, these three practices are reducing the potential for fish populations to recover and are promoting what Dr. Rhodes refers to as a 'perfect storm' for regional fisheries collapse.

On the economic side, undervaluing the wholesale price of fish is not only driving the near-collapse of fisheries resources by promoting overfishing, it is taking money out of the pockets of fishers, who have to spend more and more time and money to meet fuel and food demands. With modern trends what they are, fishers will find it harder and harder to make a living at what they know best. To help fishers through this difficult period, we need to reduce the demand for marine products and transition a percentage of fishers away from fisheries through alternative livelihoods. If these combined actions are taken, the pressure on fisheries may lessen enough to allow fish populations to eventually rebound, but that possibility gets less and less certain the longer we wait.

Finally, the study identified customary marine tenure systems, in contrast to open access systems, as one sustainable management option for marine resources in Micronesia. Open access systems, such as those found in Guam and Pohnpei, allow fishers unrestricted access to reef areas and are a major driver of overfishing. For Micronesian communities, open access systems reduce the sense of resource ownership and responsibility, and fishers within these systems feel driven to catch fish before the next person, stimulating what is commonly known as the "race to fish." Resource declines were generally most severe in open access areas, while those with low population density and stronger, more intact customary marine tenure systems (such as Yap and Palau) tended to be less overfished.

The Micronesia Challenge (www.micronesiachallenge.org) provides an ideal framework to ensure long-term sustainability of management efforts and fisheries, as it calls for regional action against overfishing, enhanced protection of marine resources and better management practices to reduce threats, like sedimentation and coastal development, to marine habitats. However, these efforts alone will not prevent overfishing unless the political and socio-economic drivers are also addressed. Identifying ways to reduce the harvest and demand for marine products, transitioning fishers away from fisheries (alternative livelihood options), and restoring sustainable harvest techniques are all paramount to overall management and conservation success.

According to Dr. Rhodes, "If we don't take action now, we will soon be facing social, economic and food security issues that will be far costlier, more painful and substantially more difficult to overcome. Although managers and politicians are responsible for making and enforcing the rules, fishers and consumers have the ultimate choice in what they take and what they buy. When the fisheries collapse, we will all have played a role."

Fifth President says he is not the one man “savior” of COM Dr. Daisy plans to help COM team to build on good work already done

By Bill Jaynes
The Kaselehlie Press

February 24, 2012

Palikir, Pohnpei, FSM—Much has been written and said about the arrival of the fifth president of the College of Micronesia FSM, Dr. Joseph Daisy and if that is so it is likely because he comes at an important time for the College. But Dr. Daisy would be the first to say that if there is some feeling that he has come on some imaginary white horse to ride in and “save” the College then they are much mistaken.

First of all, to say such a thing would be to say that nothing that has previously happened at COM has been valuable and he says that just isn't true. There are many previous activities of the College that can be built upon. Dr. Daisy says that COM staff members are capable people and that he is proud to be the new leader of the team. A winning team is what it seems he is hard at work building at the College. He said it's why he chose to speak on the subject of greatness as a choice during his remarks during his investiture ceremony.

“Certainly there are challenges at the college,” he said. “I tell anyone who asks that there are things I will be able to do and things that I will not be able to do.”

The fact that JEMCO (the Joint Economic Management Committee that oversees the U.S. Compact that consists of three U.S. representatives and two FSM representatives) unilaterally decided to begin significantly reducing funding to the college beginning next fiscal year and passing that funding on to FSM elementary and secondary education is one of those things he said he will not be able to fix.

“No doubt, it is going to have a serious impact on the College. I think it's time for us to realize that level of funding is over,” he said. “So now the question will be, ‘how is that gap closed?’”

The Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) is charged to insure that the college has a consistent source of financial support to be sure that the institution is financially stable. That is a task that can be accomplished even if the college ultimately ends up looking differently than it has previously.

Dr. Daisy said that colleges are really good at adding programs but they are notoriously bad at cutting programs that no longer effectively serve the needs of its students. Dr. Daisy did NOT say that programs or services would be cut but he did say that they will be looking at their own effectiveness for the FSM.

In June of 2011, WASC notified the College that it had been placed on probation. The College of Micronesia's accreditation is still in place while it is on probation but it must make improvements on the four recommendations made by the accreditation committee. WASC representatives will be conducting another report on progress at the college after a site visit scheduled to take place in March.

Because U.S. Department of Education regulations say that colleges with deficiencies or under sanction have two years to make corrections. COM will lose its accreditation if it has not been able to correct the situations pointed out by WASC and to be in full closed?”

compliance of accreditation standards by March of 2013.

Dr. Daisy seems confident that COM will be able to resolve the matters that concern WASC. If however, they are unable to do so, the loss of accreditation will also mean the loss of U.S. Financial Aid for Students including loss of the Pell grant which funds a majority of students at the college.

Dr. Daisy, who has significant experience with the Northeastern Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) said that WASC accreditation is not some outside mandate foisted upon an unwilling school whose rules they must grudgingly follow. He said that it is a peer review process designed to help schools to be all that they can be and to be continually improving along the way. He said that the accreditation standards should become embedded into the COM culture and that is where he wants to take the COM team.

The four recommendations of the committee were "improving institutional effectiveness and leadership and governance," "improving institutional effectiveness," "physical resources," and "financial resources."

COM-FSM is required to post the WASC accreditation documentation on their website and it can be found there at www.comfsm.fm. A user can find that information by clicking on the Accreditation tab and then clicking on archived reports.

Dr. Daisy spent a significant amount of time during our 45 minutes together speaking on the subject of equitable and integrated governance at the college. Casting no aspersions whatsoever on former leadership he said that COM has a history of decisions being pushed up to the office of the college president. He said that type of environment is too much for any one person and implied that decisions made in that way come off sounding like edicts from the mountain with little or no buy in from the stakeholders.

Ultimately he must make decisions for the colleges and recommendations for consideration by the Board of Regents but if those decisions are not based on group thinking and strong research then they are ill founded.

WASC pointed out that committees at the college were nearly always chaired by an administrator, rarely by a faculty member and that there appeared to be a disconnect between decisions that were made and the committee work that had been done to support them. Dr. Daisy said that environment is changing. Committee membership is becoming more diverse so that the concerns of all stakeholders are heard and each has input; right in line with WASC accreditation standards.

WASC earlier reported that committee minutes were not up to date on COM's website. That matter has been resolved and the minutes of each committee, including the minutes of meetings of the Board of Regents are now up to date. Though we have been told that during the first week of March, COM will be announcing the roll out of an entirely revamped website those minutes can currently be found by pressing the "wiki" tab on the website homepage at www.comfsm.fm.

In a random sample of committee minutes on the site we found a high rate of absenteeism at committee meetings particularly for representatives from the satellite campuses. As long as the satellite campuses in the other FSM States remain in operation, COM will always be challenged by geography and is currently challenged by communications technology. Right now the college is doing all that it can to encourage system wide participation in committee activities from all stake holders and it hopes only to improve its efforts.

WASC recommended that in order to improve institutional effectiveness the various plans of the college should be integrated into the development of a comprehensive long-range educational master plan that is linked to and includes a long-range budget plan. Dr. Daisy said that the college has developed plans but once again there are small disconnects amongst them and they are working to integrate the planning process to remove any disconnects.

He said that he is aware that COM has received some criticism due to the amount of resources it spends for remediation; helping students to reach an educational level they should already have attained before entrance into the college. But he disagrees. He said that the college should be providing access and that it should be taking students where it finds them and working hard together to elevate them.

"If we exclude them then they have no hope," he said.

"COM will be an institution of integrity and we WILL measure what we are doing," Dr. Daisy exclaimed. "It will take some time but according to WASC we don't have much of that."

The local word for prohibition (taboo) is inepwi or inapwih. Literally the word means to ban. In the old days, during isol or the season of scarcity, the high chiefs sometimes had to impose inepwi on kava, yams, pigs and certain species of fish, most especially during their aggregation and spawning periods. When these items were put under a ban or inepwi by the chiefs, no one was allowed to use them to make a feast, and people were expected to eat and/or use these items sparingly.

A good example is the inepwi on kiaok (a type of rabbit fish), which was imposed during the months of February and often times in March when they were known to be scarce. It is important to note that inepwi was never imposed on local produce like breadfruit because they were usually abundant and did not require attentive cultivation like other local produce.

To put prohibition or inepwi on certain local produce and species in the old days was absolutely necessary because Pohnpeians, like most of the Pacific island people, did not have access to and/or the luxury of receiving imported goods from abroad. If certain prohibitions were not put in place in those days, there was a real risk that those items could become extinct leading to widespread hunger.

Unlike in Palau and the Marshall Islands where the practice of bul and mo (same concept as inepwi) are still commonly practiced by their traditional leaders, Pohnpei's traditional leaders/high chiefs seem to have resigned much of this authority/responsibility, which once was a central role of a leader, to government agencies. Today, inepwi or prohibition is mostly carried out by the government. These prohibitions include the establishment of marine protected areas, and bans on catches of certain fish species (i.e. kemeik – pump head parrotfish, wehi – turtle, etc...) during periods when fish are aggregating and spawning.

It would serve Pohnpei well to have the traditional leaders bring back and prioritize this role, because certain, and in fact a large proportion of our local produce and fish species, are either already extinct or highly threatened. I believe that the traditional leaders have more influence in their communities than government officials and policies, and that their actions would be more effective even if they are not deemed "official" or "legal".

K Press Perspective

One ounce of doing outweighs 24 metric tons (26,400 pounds) of talk

Poor, poor FSM national government employees!

Although a qualitative interpretation of that statement does sometimes apply it's not the way I mean it for now. I mean that statement as a real and heartfelt expression of sympathy for those who, every day, must work within the confines of the bureaucracy of the FSM national government.

How must it feel to have made a good faith deal on behalf of one's employer; one that will actually save the employer money for a product the employer wants, only to find that either the employer's rules have changed or that a colleague in another department has a different interpretation of the rules; a colleague who can put the kibosh on your whole good faith deal?

How must it feel to be required to deliver embarrassing news to a vendor; news so embarrassing that even a banana would blush?

"I know that you were expecting a payment today but... (Insert reason for failed or substantially altered deal here)"

"Yes, I know that I personally promised you that 'lambda' would happen by three days ago but (insert name, or new, or previously unknown FSM policy number here) requires that a 'sigma' event must occur before 'lambda' can happen. Unfortunately a certified 'sigma' event occurs only when the moon is directly aligned between the FSM and the 'planet' Pluto. The policy is specific about that and I'm sorry that I didn't know. It's been explained to me that the wording of the policy is explicit and it must be the 'PLANET' Pluto. The fact that scientists no longer consider Pluto to be a 'planet' creates a bit of a problem. I can't tell you when the earth's moon will be in a direct line between the FSM and the 'planet' Pluto because the 'planet' Pluto no longer officially exists. Scientists are not willing to say whether they will ever reconsider their consideration. If they do reconsider their consideration and end up reclassifying Pluto as a planet, and if the earth's moon and not, for example, one of the several moons of Jupiter, (which, by the way, scientists do still consider to be a planet) does happen to stand in a direct line between what will then be the newly reconsidered 'planet' Pluto and the earth, a "sigma" event will occur and THEN I can submit your invoice to DOBS for assurance procedures. After that I can submit your 'lambda' for final processing."

"Yes, I just found out four and a half minutes ago and I'm very sorry."

"No, I'm sorry; I can't tell you how long it will take DOBS to complete their assurance procedures. I think that they are having a staffing problem at the moment."

"Yes, I know, and I'm really sorry that you already spent money based on my personal promise of "Lambda" but (insert name, or new, or previously unknown FSM policy number here) says that we just can't do it and I didn't know that until DOL told me."

"No...Yes, and I'm really sorry! I know you can't spend my word to pay your bills."

I do feel truly sorry for the poor, poor employees of the national government. I'm serious about that.

As best I can determine, most of them do work to make the best possible deals with local vendors (businesses) and they make commitments in good faith only to find that the odds are actually stacked against local FSM vendors. It really must be embarrassing for them.

Here's something that I discovered this week. The FSM doesn't allow pre-payments to local vendors and will go so far as to reject any offered discounts based on pre-payment in order to enforce that policy.

Though it is far easier for the FSM to pursue recourse from a local vendor to effectuate the delivery of products or services for which the FSM prepaid (which they apparently never do and so I suppose that matter is a non-issue) than it is to pursue an off island vendor, FSM allows pre-payment only for off island vendors.

Witness the current story in the news about a Guam based medical supply business from the Philippines that is accused of accepting an advanced payment of several thousand dollars from the Chuuk State Department of Health and that never delivered the merchandise.

I have to assume that the reason behind the FSM policy is that off island vendors have suspicions that they will never be paid, or that they will be paid so long after the vendor delivers the requested services or products to the FSM that the money spent to deliver those services or products will no longer matter. FSM CAN'T get those services or products unless they pre-pay off island businesses and so they allow for it.

At the same time, it can take weeks or even months for local businesses to secure some FSM payments even on a post paid basis. If the invoice is over $1000 it takes even longer because it has to be reviewed by a completely separate department.

Perhaps it is time for the FSM to consider whether or not it is serious about development of the private sector as it has said it is and get their policies more in line with that goal.

Seriously, one ounce of doing outweighs 24 metric tons (26,400 pounds) of talk. Local businesses suffer as they wait for the FSM, the moon and a non-existent "planet" to align and so does the economy on all levels.

Island Food Community of Pohnpei proposed the Strategic Action Plans for the next three years

By Chizuru Seki (JICA)
Island Food Community of Pohnpei

On February 28, 2012, Island Food Community of Pohnpei (IFCP) held the second day of Strategic Action Plan (SAP) Retreat at the J's Ocean Side.

Chair of the IFCP Board, Adelino Lorens, Board of directors (Engly Ioanis, Gibson Susumu, Rainer Jimmy, Penny Weilbacher, Yvonne Hawkins and X-ner Luther), IFCP partners (Conservation Society of Pohnpei, Natural Resources Conservation Service, and United States Embassy), Mr. Konrad Englberger and IFCP staff attended the retreat to finish up the draft of IFCP SAP for the next three years.

Continuing from the last retreat on February 7, 2012, Mr. Bill Raynor, one of the IFCP founding board members and a current board member, facilitated the retreat.

First, revised IFCP vision and mission was presented, and participants added comments to finalize them. Vision represents the impact IFCP would like to have in the future focusing on CHEEF (Culture, Health, Environment, Economy and Food Security) benefits of local food. IFCP revised mission will be shorter and memorable.

Then, participants were divided into three groups (awareness, research and local food policy) to review and make necessary changes on goals, objectives and activities on each focused area for the next three year SAP developed on the first day of SAP Retreat.

The second day of SAP retreat was focused on capacity assessment. To conduct the proposed activities to achieve projected objectives and goals, IFCP's human and funding sources were taken into account.

Each group came up with estimated budget and necessary personnel for each activity. If it is determined that IFCP will not have the capacity to conduct the activity, it is very important to specify the partners who will assist the work of IFCP.

Once participants were regrouped into one, SAP for each focuses area was evaluated. Projected SAP will be finalized by the IFCP board of directors, and implemented for the next three years.

After the quick local food lunch break, monitoring and evaluation of SAP was discussed to prevent IFCP SAP being unachieved. For instance, IFCP board member will check the progress every six month. How to monitor and evaluate IFCP SAP will be concluded by the IFCP board of directors and staff.

Overall, IFCP board members, partners and staff reached consensus on focusing the work of IFCP on implementing the awareness in communities and schools, research and local food policy.

The result of two days IFCP strategic action plan retreat will be put together by IFCP staff and distributed to the IFCP board members as well as its partners.

The next IFCP board meeting will be held in April, 2012. IFCP SAP will be concentered at the meeting and used to instruct the IFCP staff.

IFCP would like to thank IFCP Strategic Action Planning Retreat Participants for taking their precious time and inputting their ideas to help IFCP to take advance steps in its Go Local campaign.

Special thanks are given to Mr. Bill Raynor for facilitating both days of IFCP SAP Retreat.

IFCP would like to thank its current funding sources: SPC CePaCT, Australian Embassy, SPC Healthy Life-Style and Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA).

Pohnpei Bananas and their dishes were filmed for the Oceanic Culture Museum, Okinawa, Japan

By Chizuru Seki (JICA)
Island Food Community of Pohnpei

On Friday, February 24, 2012, Island Food Community of Pohnpei (IFCP) worked together with two Japanese film makers, Mr. Masakatsu Oki, camera man, and Ms. Kyoko Miyazawa, director.

They were here in Pohnpei to create the film about Micronesian culture for the Oceanic Culture Museum in Okinawa, Japan.

In Pohnpei, they focused on Pohnpei bananas. IFCP staff prepared banana dishes (Sun dried daiwang banana, Uht sukuuk, pihlohlo, boiled karat banana) for the film. They shot each step of the different banana recipe preparation and the cooking scenes.

Japanese film crew was very interested in filming local earth oven, uhmw, in which one of the banana dishes, pihlohlo, was baked.

They came back to IFCP on Sunday, February 26, 2012 and took photos of about seven bananas growing in banana collection site behind the IFCP training center.

The film will be edited and completed by 2013, and will be shown in the Oceanic Culture Museum, Okinawa, Japan. The copy of a film will be obtained by IFCP and used as an educational material as well as traditional knowledge preservation material.

Special thanks are given to FSM Land Based Archeologist, Mr. Adam Tyler Thompson of FSM Office of National Archives, Culture, and Historic Preservation, Nahnpei or Mr. Antonio Martin of Pohnpei Department of Land and Natural Resources, Division of Historic Preservation, Mike Iehsi of Office of Economic Affairs, Mwoakilloa First Lady, Mrs. Yumiko Lebehn, and Mrs. Mihpel Olter Susaia
